Voices for change aren’t deep enough

Perth has evolved, but the gender diversity of its CEOs hasn’t.

“The typical chief executive is more than six feet tall, has a deep voice, a good posture, a touch of grey in his thick, lustrous hair and, for his age, a fit body. It seems getting to the top is as much to do with how you look as what you achieve,” an article in respected global magazine The Economist says.

To read more, please Register or Login below

Problems, questions, feedback? Please call +61 8 9288 2100
Voices for change aren’t deep enough | Business News

Mark Beyer
Metals X puts pressure on Adit...
Fraser Beattie

Arts & Culture - latest
Limitations bite in events sec...
Dan Wilkie
Donaldson to lead WA National...
Fraser Beattie
Georgiou struts its arts stuff
Saskia Pickles
Small NFPs seek specific talen...
Saskia Pickles

Did you know?
Rio Tinto
$24.6bn

Rio Tinto
$820m
Lotterywest sales in 2012-13

Mark Pownall
Joe Pop calls time after...
Mark my words podcast
State Swim enters the fac...

Dan Wilkie
Woolworths underpins Cool...
Developers’ attention shi...
Hospitality mix at Woods...

Saskia Pickles
Investigating the depths
Vinnies overwhelmed by fi...
Karratha gas plant breakd...

© Business News 2015. You may share content using the tools provided but do not copy and redistribute.